When the end has come, moving forward

Assumptions can no longer be made that the people coming into our churches will be able to navigate their way around our prayer book or know when to stand and when to kneel. Assumptions can no longer be made that people will come into our churches at all. The question across our congregations is how we honour and utilize the gifts of the church passed down faithfully through generations and how we adjust to new realities in order to share our faith with others. For some congregations the question is how to go forward when the end has come.

The good thing is that God has given the church the richest of resources in meeting the challenges of a changing world. Our Hebrew Scriptures are written by people on the move – wandering people, imprisoned people, wilderness people, exiled people. The New Testament is written by a community not just on the move, but on the edge. These are people who are writing out of the grave danger of counting themselves followers of an executed criminal of the Roman state.

The church's sense of instability can open us to a new compassion for those who experience themselves as lost and struggling. That sense of instability invites us to be more aware, and more generous, with what God has actually given us to offer the world's need: Not an 'out' from the changes and chances of life, but the stories and rituals and prayers that will equip us for saying our goodbyes and giving thanks along the way; Not a protective armour that will shield us from vulnerability and grief, but God's armour of light, commissioned out of our vulnerability to better care for others; witnesses of how God our Shepherd and our Shelter is redeeming us, loving us and calling us by name.

"My initial thought is that God is saying 'Fear not'. The ways in which he has broken into our worship on the road suggests that he wants to deepen our relationship with him in order that we can trust him and step out in faith for him." So writes Bishop Edwards on the very wet 11th day of his pilgrimage. Follow his progress at <http://anglican.nb.ca/wp/pilgrimage/> Another of our Richmond pilgrims will walk with the bishop tomorrow.

When writing a will, do not leave money to a specific congregation as individual congregations are not incorporated. The way to handle it is to leave money to the parish for the purpose of supporting a particular congregation or house of worship, if that is what you want. For Camp Brookwood, you would leave money to the Diocesan Synod of Fredericton for the use of Camp Brookwood.
